INTRODUCTION

A series of five conferences to study problems of organization for planning and coordinating development in metropolitan areas were held this past winter by the Division of Planning of the Indiana Department of Commerce.

The objectives of this series were three-fold: to explore problems of urban and urbanizing areas, to relate the comprehensive planning approach to the solution of such problems and to maximize coordination of activities between various federal and state agencies.

Books and periodicals from the Planning Division Library were displayed at each conference. The selection of books varied according to the specific subject and speakers for each particular seminar. The following bibliography was developed from these displays.
